

Justice Karen Wenckebach was recently appointed to the Supreme Court of Yukon.

Before that she had a varied legal career: she worked for many years with Legal Aid in the areas of family, criminal and poverty law.

She then worked at Government of Yukon. For a brief period, she was part of the solicitors' group before the siren call lured her back to litigation. While in the litigation group Justice Wenckebach practiced primarily in the areas of labour, human rights and administrative law.

Justice Wenckebach was also on the Executive of the Law Society of Yukon for several years, and then became a member of the discipline committee for the Law Society.

Justice Wenckebach has a keen interest in administrative law, and loves a good judicial review.
